The Federal Housing Finance Agency’s (FHFA) mission is to promote a stable and liquid mortgage market, affordable housing and community investment through safety and soundness oversight of Fannie Mae, Freddie Mac and the Federal Home Loan Banks (FHLBanks). There are 12 FHLBanks, each with its own president and board of directors, located in different regions of the country. The FHLBanks are an essential source of stable, low-cost funds to financial institutions for home mortgage, small business, rural and agricultural loans. Collectively, FHLBanks and their member institutions are the largest source of residential mortgage and community development credit in the United States. Membership in the FHLBank System includes thrift institutions (savings and loan associations, saving banks and cooperative banks), commercial banks, and credit unions, as well as a small number of insurance companies. The FHLBank System has combined assets exceeding $1 trillion.

Within FHFA, the Division of FHLBank Regulation is seeking to fill an economist position in its headquarters office, located just blocks from the White House and easily accessible by Metro. As compared with other federal agencies, FHFA employees enjoy all the standard federal benefits, plus additional agency-specific benefits and competitive salaries not tied to the GS pay system. The agency allows for flexible work arrangements, and provides excellent benefits, including the potential for on-going medical benefits after retirement.

As an economist in the Division of FHLBank Regulation, you will be responsible for providing economic analyses of ongoing and proposed FHLBank product programs, FHFA regulations, and legislation affecting FHFA. You will conduct independent research on topics including, but not limited to: the performance of the FHLBanks; risk measurement and management at the FHLBanks; the role of the FHLBanks in housing finance, and implications stemming from the FHLBanks’ cooperative ownership structure.

FHFA is a small, fast-paced federal agency. As a member of FHFA, you will be part of an integrated team that serves the American people by ensuring a safe and sound secondary mortgage market.
Interested applicants should apply directly by visiting our on-line application system at https://www.avuedigitalservices.com/fhfa/applicant.html.

Participate in the development and analysis of new regulations, orders, policies, or advisory bulletins that should be undertaken to respond to potential threats to the safety and soundness of the FHLBank System and to ensure that the FHLBanks continue to achieve their housing finance mission.
