Institute for the Study of Regulation

Job Description: Public Policy Fellows

The Institute for the Study of Regulation (ISR) invites applications for its public policy fellowship to begin during the summer/fall of 2009. Sponsored by New York University School of Law, ISR is a non-partisan advocacy organization and think-tank dedicated to improving the quality of government decisionmaking, especially in the area of environmental, public health, and safety regulation.

Public policy fellows will be actively engaged in ISR’s research and advocacy activities. Fellows will be responsible for co-authoring ISR publications and will participate in drafting comments on pending regulation and developing legislative testimony. Public policy fellows will also be given significant time to pursue independent research topics.

Qualifications include: a PhD or Post Doctoral degree in economics, political science, or a related field and the ability to work as part of a team and under pressure. Public policy fellowships will last up to two years; salary is competitive and benefits are generous.

Applicants should submit a cover letter, curriculum vitae, writing sample, and the names of 3 references. Application materials and questions should be sent to isr@nyu.edu.